QUESTIONNAIRE

Data in the data base come from three separate forms, completed by interviewers: (A) a control card for each home, which is a card listing the members of the household (the same card stays in use as long as any of the people listed still lives there), (B) a questionnaire for occupied homes, which has 3 sections: (B1) core questions asked in all surveys at all permanently occupied homes, (B2) nearly identical questions asked when the home is found occupied by people who usually reside elsewhere (these are called 'URE' and are not counted as occupied, since people are counted at their primary home only), (B3) supplemental questions asked in occasional surveys, and (C) a questionnaire for vacant homes and units which have been torn down or converted to non-housing purposes. All of these are reproduced here except B2 since it is largely duplicative. Every question is numbered in the questionnaire, and questions in parts B and C also have sequential numbers like 0030, 2010, 2020, etc. The same sequential numbers appear on the record layout and the index to the record layout, to help you match the record layout with the questionnaire. We have also printed on the questionnaire the name and reference number of each question as found in this Codebook, for easy reference.

RECORD LAYOUT FOR FILES FROM 1984 ON, Prepared May 30, 1990

These pages show the starting column for each item, the variable name, the width if it is more than one column wide, and the 'source code' (printed on the questionnaire in a small box next to each question, a 'C' means the item comes from the control card). The source code is omitted for items that are computer-generated. A decimal place is added for sub-questions within a source code, for example different kinds of water leaks or neighborhood problems. 'Blank' means an unused field; these are usually all 9s. Columns that are different in different surveys are noted.
